To the People: Fueling the Revolution for Energy Justice
Energy justice in Oregon
NAACP's Alaska, Oregon, Washington State Area Conference

Portland, Eugene-Springfield and Corvallis/Albany Branches

The Portland NAACP branch is a leading member of a coalition of grassroots groups advancing The Portland Just Energy Transition Initiative, which will generate revenue for projects such as: low-income weatherization, energy efficiency retrofits, solar for low-income homes, and job training programs.

The Portland, Eugene-Springfield, and Corvallis/Albany branches are working together to develop a statewide strategy to address the inequitable investment in rural, low-income, and communities of color in public-purpose funds with the objective of making clean energy and energy efficiency incentives more accessible to these communities.
